This Land Is Our Land

by STACY HUTTO

Perhaps the most diversionary and contentious struggle between Native Americans and early European settlers in the United States was the concept of ownership. And ownership of land specifically.

The land grab of the Five Tribes—the Choctaw, Cherokee, Chickasaw, Muscogee (Creek), and Seminole Nations—began with the Dawes Act of 1887 and continued with the Act of Aug. 4, 1947, also know as the 47 Act or the Stigler Act.

According to Josh Riley, Senior Policy Analyst for Choctaw Nation Government Relations, since these acts, there have been many pieces of legislation meant to undermine the Native concept of land and what it means to be the caretakers of the land.

However, on May 23, 2017, sponsor Congressman Tom Cole (R–OK 4) introduced H.R. 2606-Stigler Act Amendments of 2017 to the House of Representatives. The legislation which was co-sponsored by Congressman Markwayne Mullin (R–OK 2), Rep. Frank D. Lucas (R-OK 3), and Rep. Steve Russell (R–OK 5) amends Section 1 of the Stigler Act so that land in Oklahoma belonging to a lineal descenWhat is this you call property? It cannot be the earth, for the land is our mother, nourishing all her children, beasts, birds, fish and all men. The woods, the streams, everything on it belongs to everybody and is for the use of all. How can one man say it belongs only to him?

the Stigler Act of "one–half or more Indian blood."

The Stigler Amendment of 2017 was referred to the House Committee on Natural Resources the same day it was introduced to the House of Representatives. The Act was referred to the Subcommittee on Indian, Insular, and Alaska Native Affairs on June 7, 2017.

"The Senate is waiting for the Stigler Act Amendment to pass the House, then they will adopt the House version of the bill," Riley said. The Act is expected to pass the House of Representatives.

Once the Act passes the House and the Senate it goes before the President of the United States for his signature and then becomes law.

Once the Stigler Act Amendments become law, land belonging to tribal members will remain in restricted free status and passed out of the one-half degree blood quantum, the land would lose its restricted free status. Federal law does not dictate a minimum Native American quantum requirement for any other tribe in the United States other than the Five Tribes.

Restricted free status means the land is under tribal jurisdiction, as well as federal government jurisdiction. It is not part of the State of Oklahoma and the State of Oklahoma cannot tax the land. Land in restricted status is protected from state overreach. It is essentially trust land, sovereign land.

The Stigler Act also stated the State Courts of Oklahoma had exclusive jurisdiction of all guardianship matters affecting tribal members of the Five Tribes. The state courts were also given jurisdiction over all proceedings to ad-be protected from state overreach.

The original Dawes Act allowed the federal government to survey tribal lands and take the land from tribal communal holding and disperse the land out to individual tribal citizens. minister estates, to probate the wills of deceased members of the Five Tribes, as well as to determine heirs.

Land that lost the restricted free status was no longer sovereign land and was subject to taxation by the federal government. It

In the amendment, land restrictions will be lifted for Five Tribes members whose blood quantum is one-half degree or more American Indian blood.

Section 1 of the Act of August 11, 1955, is the only part of the Act where a blood quantum is mentioned. Removing the section will continue the goal of the Stigler Act Amendment.

It also repeals Section 2 of the Stigler Act. Section 2 details how to determine the quantum of Indian blood of an heir or devisee. The Amendment Act also removes any mention in The Stigler Act was yet another way to take land away from tribal control and place in state control so the state would be able to tax the land.

Over the years and through treaties, the Five Tribes received a total combined original allotment of 16,565,571.10 acres. The current allotments, as of February 2016, was 424,622.491 acres. Over the years the Five Tribes have lost 16,140,948.60 acres. (See graphic for breakdown by tribe.)

The actual title to the allotment parcels were set forth in the Stigler Act. The Stigler Act stated, upon probate, if the heirs of an original allottee would also enable oil and gas companies to enter the land without having to go through the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

In July 2015, Choctaw Chief Gary Batton, Chickasaw Nation Governor Bill Anotubby, Muscogee (Creek) Nation Principal Chief George Tiger, Seminole Nation Principal Chief Leonard M. Harjo, and Cherokee Nation Principal Chief Bill John Baker unanimously signed a resolution at the Inter–Tribal Council of the Five Civilized Tribes denouncing the impact of the Stigler Act. The resolution ended with a request to Oklahoma congressmen to begin reformation of the Stigler Act.

New Choctaw Nation Seal Represents Chahta Sia

he Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma has a proud and storied heritage. Ours is a story of faith-the promise of hope and a future; of courage-resilience in the face of adversity; and a story of compassion-a nation of humanitarians.

We have endured much—a journey of displacement, of rights stripped, of a sovereignty infringed upon, but today we stand at the beginning of an entirely new era.

With all that we have endured, our people, their strength, courage and commitment to the tribe, are what have allowed us to become the third largest Native American tribe in the United States.

We strive to better the lives not just of our people, but all who we interact with in southeast Oklahoma, the United States, and across the world.

Our children are more educated than ever, our members' access to health care has never been wider spread and our commercial entities have never been more successful. Nevertheless, there is more to be done.

For our members to take pride in being Choctaw, our name must stand for all that we are: an enduring tribe that brings positive change to those it interacts with.

We want to be known for what we are—a thriving people-thus creating a renewed sense of pride for the Choctaw people.

As a sovereign nation as well as individually, our tribe and its members maintain relationships multifaceted in nature.

Across all, the personality with which we carry forward ourselves directly reflects on our nation. In achieving our vision of living out the Chahta spirit we want to be known as big-hearted, humble, and strong.

We are humanitarians at our core. With numerous acts of kindness throughout our history, the Choctaw Nation has earned a name synonymous with generosity. We take care of those, both near and far, who need our help. It's in our culture to give and share without hesitation and without expectation of getting something in return.

Regardless of what happens to us, we never lose our compassion for others-when others are in pain, we feel it. Having a big heart comes from all the experiences we have been through. It is the essence of who we are as a Nation.

We have much to be proud of, yet we remain humble. We do not brag—so much so that our friends and neighbors are largely unaware of all our successes.

Our humility is not a lack of confidence; rather, it comes from confidence in our strength as a Nation. We know that we are strong, that we have beaten the odds and will continue to endure.

Being humble and strong means that we have faith in our abilities and that we're satisfied with quiet successes. We don't need to draw attention to ourselves.

These very personality traits are what characterize a true Choctaw Tvshka. Tvshka means warrior, and it carries a sense of duty and honor. We take great pride in our heritage, and we are fiercely protective of it. But a warrior's duty is also to help those in need. The honorable title of Tvshka is bestowed only on those whose great deed or continual service has had a positive impact on the tribe.

We're a peaceful people, but that doesn't mean we don't have fight. Living out the Chahta spirit takes tremendous courage and fortitude.

Being Tvshka means standing up and fighting for the well-being of the Choctaw Nation, for our people, for all that we value and hold dear.

A bright future lies ahead for our Nation—a future that holds prosperity for our children and many more generations to come. They will live out the Chahta spirit through faith, family, and culture.

The Great Seal of the Choctaw Nation has been updated to have one culturally accurate official image that stands for everything we are.

The idea of a seal was first formalized in 1857 in the constitution signed at Skullyville, Oklahoma. The description added in an 1860 act was, "a great seal with 'The Great Seal of the Choctaw Nation' around the edge, and a

The newest version of The Great Seal of the Choctaw Nation was approved by Tribal Council on June 10, 2017. It took months of research to identify and create the most accurate visualization of the traditional Choctaw items.

design of an unstrung bow, with three arrows, and a pipehatchet blended together engraved in the center."

There have been many variations of the seal through the years culminating in 1940 with a design by Oklahoma City architect, Guy C. Reid.

The center elements were not indicative of a traditional Choctaw bow, arrows, and pipe-hatchet. There continue to be changes, and our Great Seal has drifted in many directions.

The Great Seal of the Choctaw Nation is a representation of Choctaw people throughout the world. It should always be used with reverence and responsibility.

A group of cultural and member service leaders have worked for months to research, identify, and create the most accurate visualization of the traditional Choctaw items. Significant input from tribal historians and elders was reviewed concerning the limited modifications.

In accordance with official tribal policy, the Choctaw Nation Tribal Council approved The Great Seal of the Choctaw Nation on June 10, 2017.

Starting with the Dawes Act and continuing with the Act of Aug. 4, 1974, or Stigler Act, Summer 2017 marks the third official year of the Choctaw Nation Internship Program. The program collaborates with multiple Choctaw Nation resources such as Higher Education, Career Development, the Chahta Foundation, Job for the Day, and Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA), as well as several surrounding colleges. It offers opportunities to students who live throughout the United States.

Participation increases each year through outreach and the continued success of the pro-health care, and commerce divisions. They have come to us from all over Oklahoma as well as Michigan and Texas.

It's a wonderful opportunity for both the interns and the Choctaw Nation. The interns are learning valuable skills in positions of Ambulatory Care, Curatorial, Human Resources, Fitness Counseling, Information Technology, and Revenue Audit. An intern is also in the Biskinik and helped in the preparation of this month's edition as well as taking the photos for this column.

The internship program is one of several in the Choctaw Nation that helps prepare youth for the future. The interns learn through hands-on experience. The experience is invaluable in ensuring they are prepared for a successful career. The program has proven to be successful for both the Choctaw Nation and the interns. Many have been hired to continue in fulltime positions since the beginning of the program in areas of Information Technology, Risk Management, Human Resources, and Accounting.

I am proud of the departments that have invested the time and resources to offer these opportunities. They are showing true Chahta spirit by training and working with the interns.

Gabe Lewis learned about stickball during a class on Choctaw cultural traditions. The interns were introduced to several other activities including social dancing and Choctaw history.

Trail of Tears Bike Team Finishes 500 Mile Ride

by KENDRA GERMANY

On May 26, 2017, the Choctaw Nation Trail of Tears Bike Team pedaled their way to the finish line at the Tribal Headquarters in Durant, marking an end to their seven day journey.

The team covered 500 miles across four different states including Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Oklahoma. This is the sixth year the team has embarked on this journey in honor of our ancestors who traveled the Trail of Tears in the 1800s.

According to Teresa Eagle Road, RPMS Technician, the group traveled around 50 to 70 miles a day, making their way through all different kinds of weather conditions and terrain.

"There was cool, heat, rain, bad roads, and we even had dogs chase us," said Eagle Road.

Eagle Road stated she suffered from heat exhaustion during the trip, and one rider, Jana Boykin, Deputy Director of Tribal Transit, had a wreck during the journey that left her right arm in a cast. Boykin broke her thumb and fractured a finger, but still continued riding.

For many, the ride is an emotional connection to their heritage.

"I feel that my ancestors endured a lot going through the terrain they had to go through in order to leave Mississippi and make it to Oklahoma," Boykin said. "I do feel truly, that there was a lot of perseverance to do it. That is really emotional for me."

by Kendra Germany

The Trail of Tears Bike Team and Chief Gary Batton pedal into the Choctaw Tribal Headquarters on May 26, escorted by tribal police. They were welcomed back by a crowd of cheering fans.

Johnnie Anderson, Pharmacy Automation Specialist, has been a part of this ride for five years. For Anderson, who took the journey this year with his son Austin, the ride is a learning experience.

"Growing up, I learned about the Trail of Tears in history, but it's just a story. When you're out there at the different places you stop and learn about, it brings it home."

According to Chief Batton, this bike ride is an opportunity to connect with our Choctaw ancestors and their struggles.

"The ride is an opportunity for participants to learn more about and experience more closely, our history, namely the removal from our homeland," said Batton. "The ride is strenuous, it's long, and it gives riders time to reflect, and to remember."

Chile-Lime Tortilla Chips

- 12 6-inch corn tortillas
- Canola oil cooking spray
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon chili powder
- <sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub> teaspoon salt

Preparation

1. Prepare Pico de Gallo: Combine tomatoes, onion, cilantro, jalapeno to taste, lime zest and juice, and sugar in a medium serving bowl. Season with salt and pepper.

2. Prepare Chips: Position oven racks in the middle and lower third of oven; preheat to 375°F.

Coat both sides of each tortilla with cooking spray and cut into quarters. Place tortilla wedges in an even layer on 2 large baking sheets. Combine lime juice and chili powder in a small bowl. Brush the mixture on each tortilla wedge and sprinkle with salt.

Bake the tortillas, switching the baking sheets halfway through, until golden and crisp, 15-20 minutes (depending on the thickness of the tortillas).

Youth Events Hosts Sells Graduates Stickball Camps

by WYATT STANFORD

The Choctaw Nation Youth Events Department hosted stickball camps for tribal youth in Tvshka Homma May 30-June 2.

The Youth Events Department held its two annual summer stickball camps for tribal members ages 8-18. The first camp for youth from the southern districts of the Choctaw Nation took place May 30-31, and the second, for the northern districts took place June 1-2.

Students learned the fundamentals of stickball, from how to throw, catch, and score a goal to the history behind the game and its significance in Choctaw culture. In addition, the youth learned the social and exhibition types of play as well as the rules and field positions for each.

Coaches from the Choctaw Nation stickball team instructed students with assistance from local players. Participants tested their skills through scrimmages and individual skill competitions.

This year, 141 youth from the north took part as well as 141 from the south, making the total number of participants 282. Javen Henson from Youth Events coached students throughout the camps.

"We look forward to continuing to grow our stickball camp numbers as well as our community of youth stickball players," Henson said.

The stickball camps are two of the many camps offered throughout the summer by the Youth Events Department. The other camps include other sports, such as golf, softball, baseball, and basketball, as well as cultural enrichment.

Ag in the Classroom can answer many questions. How would you like your Maine-Anjou cooked? Why can't you drive a Limousin? Would you like a glass of chardonnay with your Charolais? If these words all sound foreign to you, they are.

The Maine-Anjou, Limousin, and Charolais are all names of species of cattle raised in different parts of Europe and France. The chardonnay, of course, is a French grape wine.

The vocabulary is all part of the curriculum taught by representatives of the Choctaw Nation Agriculture Outreach Program. The Ag in the Classroom members have been visiting with the Jones Elementary students all year in an effort to promote awareness of the daily role agriculture plays in each of our lives.

The curriculum is hands-on, riveting, and fun for students of all ages. Do you know why milking cows do not give milk or what dirt babies grow up to be? The answers are provided in the curriculum and classroom activities.

Oklahoma is the second leading producer of beef in the nation. By-products from cattle can include lipstick, chewing gum, perfume, shaving cream, photography film, and various facial cosmetics.

These fun facts were part of the lessons that the Ag in the Classroom staff explored with the Jones Academy students during the year.

For the dirt baby project, students saw firsthand what was required for successful plant growth, providing a closer view into the plant life cycle.

Students also studied pollination and planted a vegetable garden on a raised bed consisting of tomatoes, basil, cilantro, cantaloupe, watermelon and sweet peppers.

According to their website, the Choctaw Nation Agriculture Outreach works with youth, community and agriculture producers to provide education requiring participation and researchbased information to help agriculture ventures expand and thrive.

And, if you are wondering why milking cows do not give milk, it's because milking cows are used to nurse calves and not for dairy products.

Diligent staff members of the Ag in the Classroom Program were Nikki Schuth-Mitchell, Macy Vansickle, Lakesha Hawkins, Larriann Chambers, and director Jody House.

Jacob Amos, a junior at McAlester High School, won third place in the long jump at the Oklahoma Secondary School Activities Association 2017 5A State Track Meet held May 12–13 at Yukon High School in Yukon, Oklahoma. Amos jumped 22 feet 11/4 inches. He is the son of Robert and Jennifer Amos Watkins. He is the grandson of Paul Amos and Roberta Hood. His great-grandparents are Walter and Sarah Amos of McAlester and the late Calvin and Etta Green, also of McAlester.

Newcomb Earns Associates Before High School Graduation

Kaleigh Michelle Newcomb graduated with an Associate Degree of Science from Frank Phillips College three weeks prior to her high school graduation on May 26, 2017.

During the high school awards presentation the principal announced this was the first year for this degree to be offered. Newcomb was nominated along with approximately 200 candidates for a Dual Credit Associates Degree Program at Frank Phillips College in Borger, Texas. She was selected along with 22 other students to actually participate in the Honors Program offered through Borger High School and Frank Phillips College. The program began the summer before her junior year. For two summers she took summer college classes and did not have a break from school until the end of her senior year. Newcomb's future plans include going to Amarillo College in the Fall of 2017 and finishing up the few prerequisites she has left. She will then apply to the RN nursing program beginning January 2018. Once the RN nursing program is completed, Newcomb will go to West Texas A&M University to earn a BSN degree and would like to work in a Hospital Labor and Delivery unit. She is the daughter of Brent and Tiffany Newcomb. Her brother and wife are Lane and Paige Newcomb and her niece is Brecklyn of Ft. Riley, Kansas. She is the granddaughter of Jerry and Peggy Newcomb of Fritch, Texas, and Randall and Linda Robinson of Borger, Texas.

I would like to take the time and give a big thank you to the Oklahoma School of Welding. I am proud to say I have been attending the school here in McAlester for Structural Welding. I love the hands on experience. The instructors, William Roberts, John Allen and Sterling Taylor help us so much. They are amazing people who demonstrate and motivate us in so many ways. Thank you for having the patience to teach me the skills needed to achieve my goal to become a welder. I would also like to give a big thank you to Larry Amos and the Choctaw Nation for providing the funding for my schooling.

Nakina Rachelle Williams McAlester, Oklahoma

Thank you to the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma for the funeral assistance provided for Kiley James Russell. His untimely death was devastating to his young wife and small sons, as well as his parents, siblings and their families. The assistance is greatly appreciated by the entire family. We cannot adequately express our gratitude for the consideration and kindness shown at the challenging time.

Pamela and Donald Wells

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Chief and all who make it possible that I receive my birthday cards each year. This marks my 84th year on this Earth. I am so very proud of my Choctaw heritage. I stem from the Folsom Ward–Thompson–Kelly families. Thank you Chief Batton and the many who lead this great Choctaw Nation!

Patsy S. (Kelly) Mandrell Yuma, Arizona

I want to thank the Chief, tribal council and Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma for supporting the higher education goals of its members. This past year I successfully completed my first year of medical school at the University of California Riverside with financial assistance from the Higher Education Assistance Committee. With your help, I was able to focus on the business and excitement of learning to become the best doctor that I can be. I've used my time to focus on my studies and to become a student leader at our free health clinic, where I am able to further give back to the local community.

Margaret Clark Riverside, California

Much thanks and appreciation to Sue Folsom and the Choctaw Nation Cultural Affairs Team. We could not have asked for any more support for the recent 150th Anniversary Celebration of the historic Choate Cabin in Indianola. The cultural exhibits and presentations were outstanding. It was extra special to have Dr. Ian Thompson with us on Saturday afternoon to speak specifically on Choctaw Cabins. There were approximately 350 participants at Choate Prairie and Indianola for the event, as well as Choate family members and guests from all over the country.

Obituary Policy

Obituary submissions are for Choctaw tribal members and are free of charge. The Biskinik will only accept obituary notices from funeral homes. Family members/individuals may still submit funeral notices as long as the notice is from the funeral home or printed in their local newspapers through a funeral home service. Full-length handwritten notices will not be accepted. The Biskinik strives to serve all Choctaws, therefore, any handwritten notices received will be searched online for official funeral home notices. If none are found, efforts will be made to contact the family and make arrangements for an official notice. Due to space limitations, there is a 150 word limit for obituaries. Full obituaries can be read online. Send official obituary notices to:

Life in the Saddle ofa Choctaw Cavalry Trooper

By 1860, the Choctaw Nation had made great lengths in recovery since the removal 30 years prior. Choctaw businessmen and farmers had productive trade in crops, cotton, timber, cattle, horses and coal.

Students who graduated from boarding schools were sent to college and were coming back as leaders with degrees in business, law and medicine.

However, just a year later the American Civil War broke out, plunging the Choctaw Nation into turmoil once again.

Unable to stay out of the war, the Choctaw Nation sided with the Confederate States of American as allies in the summer of 1861.

Leaving their communities and their fields, Choctaw brothers, uncles, fathers, and cousins answered the call to protect the lands that they called home.

The Choctaw Nation organized four regiments of cavaliers. These regiments would be First Choctaw Mounted Rifles, Second Regiment Cavalry, Third Regiment Cavalry, and the First Choctaw and Chickasaw Mounted Rifles.

The beginning days of a Choctaw cavalry trooper would have been hard because the regiments were not well supplied. Many of the men were supplied equipment and weapons from their home or communities.

Their gear would have been a saddle, blanket, mess kit, tobacco, pipe, and a horse or mule.

They wore Euro-American clothes such as hats and bandannas on their head, hunting jackets, vests, trousers, leggings and boots.

Others wore traditional dress consisting of turbans, feathers, skinned animal heads, leggings and breach clout, beaded sashes and bandoleer bags.

Weapons included hunting knives, black powder rifles and muskets, black powder pistols, shotguns and bows. Since many of the weapons were single shot, Choctaws were known to carry multiple weapons.

Despite being poorly armed and outfitted, Choctaw troops were noted to be fierce fighters, especially in close combat.

When not on campaign, the day-to-day life of Choctaw

by Nick Wallace

Choctaw Cavalry reenactors demonstrate how a cavalry trooper would be outfitted and the gear they would have used while fighting for the South in the Civil War.

troops was mostly dull. The men tended to their equipment and weapons, but most importantly their horse.

Being a mounted unit, a soldier would take care of his horse before himself. They would water and feed their horse before attending to their personal needs. Horses would need to be brushed and have their hooves checked daily.

Choctaws were very casual about their view on enlistment. If there was nothing to be done, they would travel to their communities to attend fields or home affairs.

Other times, they would leave the garrison to go on personal raids against Union troops. Choctaw troops would also hold stickball games for entertainment and to keep their edge as warriors.

Forts in Indian Territory were more logistic centers that issued supplies than fortified garrisons. In the summer of 1832, Choctaw and Chickasaw troops built Fort McCulloch with redoubts and bastions to protect Fort Washita and Texas.

To read more about Fort McCulloch, please look at the Iti Fabvssa in the March 2014 and April 2014 issues of the Biskinik.

As the war progressed, newer weapons were acquired from raids; Colt or Remington revolvers, Sharps rifles and various other guns. Eventually, the Confederate army issued Choctaw troops with Texas or Tyler rifles.

Rations of corn, pork, and beef were issued to the soldiers, as well as local foods. By 1864, as the war made its way deeper into Indian Territory, Choctaw communities and fields were destroyed or abandoned and soldiers and families relied on imported foods and supplies.

Other native people, such as the Muscogee and Cherokee people, made their way into the Choctaw Nation looking for safety and food, putting a larger strain on food supplies.

Choctaw cattle and horses were being stolen by Texans and resold back to the Confederate army.

In the spring of 1865, these brave men would finally get to go home. In 1866, a treaty was signed between the Choctaw Nation and the United States, ending the war between the two Nations.

Despite over one-third of the tribe destitute from the ravages of the war, the Choctaw Nation would rebuild itself once again.

Many of the warriors who fought to protect their families, communities, and their Tribe would continue to serve Choctaw people as Lighthorsemen, community leaders and chiefs.

-YOUTH OF THE NATION-

ty and there I will major in Elementary Education and become a second grade teacher.

Falvmmichi has also taught me a lot about responsibility. People always say "be a good YAB kid" and stuff like that, but they never tell you someone is always watching. That's one thing that has stuck with me on a personal level. There's always someone watching, so for the younger kids that means that I have to be a good role model and show them the right way. For the older people it means that I have to show them I'm responsible and a good citizen in my community. Someone who can be trusted and respected, and that's all I've ever wanted to be. Falvmmichi has given me that reputation, seeing the kids at football games or just around town they get so excited, and I'm not gonna lie, I get excited too. I can hear my name being screamed across Walmart on any given night by at least one Falvmmichi child I have been in class with. I just grow a bond with each individual child even after he or she goes on past the second grade. That's where the responsibility comes in. It's my responsibility to make sure these kids know to be a part of our community. Build up the community! I tell kids all the time I'm in YAB and that's why I get to see them so much and when they grow up they should join YAB just like I did. I'm forever grateful for the Choctaw Nation Youth Advisory Board. I've learned social skills I will take with me wherever I go. Before YAB I was just fine sitting in the corner by myself. Now looking back on my freshmen year I think about all the opportunities and things I just let pass by me. All because I was to afraid to say something or do something. Now I know it's ok to go after what I want, and I know it's ok to ask questions. It's good to ask question and just little things like that have really changed the way I do things and overall how I act. YAB helped me to knock down these walls of fear. I now can talk to anyone and feel confident about talking about anything. I hope I win this scholarship, but YAB has really helped me to grow so much as a student and as a person. To the point where you really can't put a price tag on that. I've gained so many friends and made connections I believe will last a lifetime. I've been welcomed by so many and I feel like I have so many extra families through YAB. To me those are just extra blessings. YAB is a blessing and I'm just thankful that I got to spend four years with the best people in the 10 1/2 counties, students and staff all included!

Learning Leadership and Social Skills hv Mikayla Simone Hampton

I have been a member of the Hugo Chapter of the Choctaw Nation Youth Advisory Board for four years.

Through these four years I've learned so much about leadership, responsibility, and also what it means to be a good citizen.

YAB is about so much more than just community service hours. When I first joined it was by complete accident. I had heard about YAB before, but I didn't really know how to join and wasn't too much interested. But, one day I went to pick up something at the local Boys and Girls Club and Angie Smith invited me to attend my first YAB meeting. Ever since then I've been welcomed and loved by every YAB person, young or old, that I have met.

One specific event I can remember that has impacted ALL of my decisions since was the first Falvmmichi class I did. I went to Falvmmichi training not having a clue what it was and just being excited that I got to miss a day of school.

Well, the training was fun and luckily I didn't have to speak. For most of the day I went unnoticed by anyone, so it seemed like a win-win to me. Little did I know that the training was nowhere near close to what it's actually like in the real classroom.

When going into the classroom I couldn't just disappear into the back of the class or just stay to myself, I had to interact with the kids. The moment I got in that class something changed. I fell in love with the atmosphere, the feeling of the classroom, and the kids! I was hooked. I wanted to be at every Falvmmichi class, even after I graduated, it was that much fun! Just being around little kids.

It was that event that helped me realize how much I truly loved children. That day I realized when I grew up I wanted to be a teacher. And that's what I'm now working towards! I have been accepted into East Central Universi-

Devon Mihesuah: feeling empowered

by TINA FIRQUAIN

Devon Abbott Mihesuah is a proud and strong Choctaw woman, much like the women from Choctaw history. She is an endowed professor, a published author, an indigenous food connoisseur, but most importantly, she is Choctaw.

"Choctaw is my identity." Mihesuah explained that no matter what she has pursued in her life, being Choctaw has been her constant and will always be who she is.

From a young age, Mihesuah has been aware of her culture, but has wondered about her history.

Mihesuah reflected on her family's history and stories, "You grow up learning about your trip and about your family. You hear stories that were told to your family by their ancestors."

She has since then found out that her ancestor

Lewis Wilson signed the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek in Mississippi and his son, Charles, was a Lighthorseman.

She also found out that Charles was brutally murdered and she said, "that has really left me with a burning curiosity and I just want to know more."

Mihesuah first went to Texas Christian University and was the first woman to receive a scholarship under Title IX. At that time she was also studying biology and physics, which she said, was a bit overwhelming. After graduating with a master's degree, she taught high school science in New Mexico.

During her first year of teaching in New Mexico, Mihesuah was presented with an opportunity to go back to TCU and study history with a scholarship for Native students. She said, "I just jumped into it with both feet and then realized, this is very much what I'm interested in and what I want to do."

Now, Mihesuah holds a doctorate in American History and is a historian and the Cora Lee Beers Price Endowed Teaching Professor at the University of Kansas. When she was hired as an endowed professor, there was only one other Native woman in her type of position, and so, she said, it has been an uphill battle.

According to Mihesuah, "Just writing does not get you anywhere if you are a female scholar." She continued, "It's a double whammy if you are a Native scholar and a woman." This has not stopped her from pursuing her research and writing 16 books, two of which are anthologies.

Her first book was on the Cherokee females in seminary. She has written about stereotypes, Indigenous women, and methodologies of writing about Natives. She has started a child's adventure series and has written four novels.

Mihesuah has won several awards for her writing such as Critic's Choice Award, Best Fiction, Best Research Book of the Year, and even an Outstanding Book on Oklahoma History Award by the Oklahoma Historical Society for Choctaw Crime and Punishment: 1884-1907.

After an abrupt career change and fighting the battle of being a female and Native scholar, Mihesuah is starting to feel "somewhat confident" at 60 years old, but she said, "I should have been feeling confident in my 30s."

She continued, "There are always people who don't want you to succeed," but she said that has never stopped her from doing exactly what she wants.

For nine years she was the editor of the American Indian Quarterly. She also regularly speaks at symposiums and events about issues that have affected or are facing indigenous people.

An issue that she is passionate about is indigenous food ways.

Her book, Recovering Our Ancestors' Gardens: Indigenous Recipes and Guide to Diet and Fitness tied for a Special Award of the Jury of the Gourmand World Cookbook with Martha Stewart.

She is also the creator of the website American Indian Health and Diet Project, which is a "website devoted to recovering the health of Indigenous peoples."

Mihesuah said, "I am a very ardent believer in investigating our traditional ways of eating and our ancient food ways."

She has found that family gardens were a symbol of stability and the family staying together.

"As a historian, I don't just start in the past, I look at where we are today then I look backwards to see how we got here." Mihesuah takes this philosophy and uses it in everything she does whether it is writing about indigenous people and their foods or teaching her humanities students.

Mihesuah has had trials along her path, much like her ancestors, and being a historian she knows "What it means to be Choctaw is, you are a part of an extremely complex, rich history."

And she feels her knowledge of history gives her confidence in her path as a Choctaw woman regardless of what is happening in her life and whatever may come.

SUMMER FOOD SERVICE PROGRAM

The Choctaw Nation Health Services will be sponsoring the Summer Food Service Program this summer. The USDA oversees this federally funded program in which the State of Oklahoma administers for them. The Summer Food Program (SFSP) ensures low-income children continue to receive nutritious meals when school is not in session. The SFSP is designed to fill the nutrition gap and make sure children have access to the nutritious meals they need through the summer months. Hunger is one of the most severe roadblocks to the learning process. Lack of nutrition during the summer months may set up a cycle for poor performance once school begins again. Hunger may also make children more prone to illness and other health issues. All children in the below area are invited to our Summer Food Services Programs. You DO NOT have to be Native American to participate. This is an Equal Opportunity Program.

SFSP sites this summer are located at:

Broken Bow Choctaw Head Start Building	11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.	Talihina Boys and Girls Club	11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

The 105-year-old Choctaw sits in his home in Long Beach, California, surrounded by University of Oklahoma memorabilia.

Harold "Pop" Spring was born in Jumbo, he said, in Pushmataha County, Oklahoma, in December 1911. He grew up there, attending school through second grade. He learned Choctaw and English at the same time.

His dad, James Franklin Spring, was half Choctaw and his mom, Della, was English. Pop still uses the Choctaw words he remembers such as achukma (good) and tanchi palvska (corn bread).

Spring's family would bring a sack of corn to the gristmill in Jumbo where it would be ground into cornmeal. He said his mother would make tanchi palvska.

Spring started going to school at Goodland Academy after his mother passed away and it became hard for his dad to work and raise all five kids.

The 9-year-old boy had four sisters and all but the oldest went to Goodland. One of Spring's chores at Goodland was to go to the post office every day to pick up the mail and carry it back.

"We used to speak Choctaw there all the time," Spring added, repeating from his remarkable memory what the children were told, "If you are going to live with other people you have to speak English. Don't speak Choctaw anymore! If you do you have to walk around the ring for one hour on Saturday.""

Did he have to walk on a Saturday? Yes, he said with a deep chuckle. They would get demerits for speaking Choctaw and he walked the ring many times.

After he finished Goodland, he and a friend, Richard Fitzgerald, decided they would go to school at Chilocco, "waaaayy up in the top northern part of Oklahoma. We hitchhiked there, only a few miles from the Kansas line. We went there and talked to the disciplinary," he said.

"Oh yeah!," they were told. "We got to have you two boys, fine lookin' men, come to school here." "Come supper time, it was roll call, get out and fall in line!" Spring's voice becomes the strict voice of a disciplinarian. They would be marched to the dining room, eat, and repeat the same thing when they woke up and went to breakfast.

"I told my buddy, 'I don't think I'm going to like this.""

He said the same thing. It was two miles from Chilocco to the highway. They walked out there and caught a ride with two girls who took them to Ponca City.

The boys decided to try Murray College in Tishomingo, which was good.

In those days, hitchhiking was considered a normal way to travel. Spring took it to extra lengths when he decided to hitchhike to Los Angeles to watch the 1932 Olympics.

He said he made the decision while he was sitting in a pool hall, went to his house, got his suitcase with the Murray College sticker on it, and left. He made it almost 106 miles from Durant to Mineral Wells, Texas, before dark.

Spring remembers crawling under one of the big billboards and going to sleep. When he got up the next morning, he caught a ride from Mineral Wells all the way to Abilene.

"I was standing in a service station, drinking a Coke, and a guy comes up in a Model T car–'tookalooka, tookalooka, tookalooka," he mimics the car and laughs.

"'Oh, there's Bud Spring," an old friend called out. "'Come here! Where you going?"

"I'm going to California," Spring said. He was told he would have a ride if he could wait a week. His friend was working on a Deusenberg automobile from Germany so he decided to stay the week. They worked on the car during the day and at night, they would get in the Ford and drive to a prairie where they would hunt jackrabbits.

Not having a ticket didn't stop Spring from attending the Olympic games. He crawled under the fence. He had traveled all those miles to watch William "Bill" Arthur Carr from Stanford, who held the world's record for running. He looked just like a friend of Spring's from Goodland. Carr ran the 4:40 dash and won, tickling Spring.

As soon as the games were over, it was time to go home. Spring caught a ride to Long Beach where a man in a Packard touring car stopped and said, "Get in! I'm going to San Diego." He remembered the vehicle had a windshield between the front and back seats. He let the young Okie off in front of a motel in San Diego.

"The going was pretty tough on the way home. That night I got to Phoenix and decided it was going to take me too long. Hitchhiking wasn't any good there," Spring said.

"I went down to the train depot and asked, 'Hey, Mack, what train goes to Fort Worth or Dallas?""

He pointed out the train and Spring got on it, riding it all the way to Dallas. It took about three or four days.

"When I got to Dallas, I took a bath, put on clean clothes, and hitchhiked back to Durant."

Spring stayed in Durant for a while attending Southeastern Teacher's College, but soon found his way to Chickasha. He started selling shoes at Cannon Shoe Company where he met the love of his life, Aldene when she came in to buy a pair of shoes.

Spring blushed as he told how he whispered in her ear, "You're kinda pretty." He sold her a pair of shoes, asked her out, and they soon married.

The Cannon Shoe Company owners decided Spring would make a great manager and asked Spring if he wanted to go to school to learn management. Spring agreed and was sent to Oklahoma City where he was a manager–in–training. After four weeks, they shipped him to Hutcheson, Kansas, for six months and then he went to Nebraska. Spring recites every address where he lived as he moved from one management position to another.

It wasn't long before the Spring family decided it was time to move home to Oklahoma, and eventually they moved to California.

They made in to the Golden State in about a week with no plans other than to go to work and find a home.

Selling shoes was familiar, so he went to work at Walker Department Store until "Uncle Sam" told him you either get in the Army or in defense. Spring chose defense and attended a trade school at Long Beach where he worked in a machine shop.

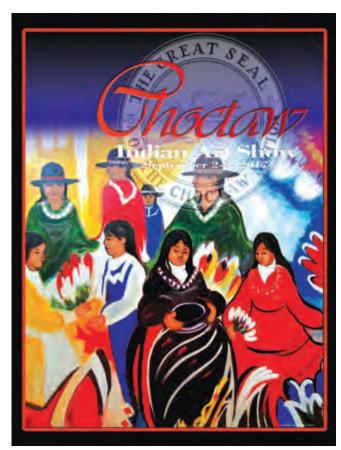

"Work, work, work, at night," he described it. "I got to where I could operate the machine pretty good and I got a job at Douglas Aircraft.

He remembers working on the airplane carrier, Kitty Hawk, and the Big Mo from Missouri.

Years later, he and his wife obtained their real estate licenses. He stays abreast of everything going on by reading the papers and watching the news. His memory is better than many people a third of his age, and independent throughout his life, he drove until he was 101.

Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ (1 Peter 1:13 KJV). The Apostle Peter was a prominent disciple during the ministry of Jesus and had a tremendous impact on the early church. This first letter was written to the believers to encourage them to endure the intense persecution that was prevalent in the area. Christians were being persecuted and executed by the Roman Emperor. They were being forced to renounce their faith in Christ and worship the Roman gods. The metaphor that the Apostle is using was taken from a type of dress which consisted of a loose outer garment reaching to the feet. To prevent the loose garments from getting in the way during times of battle or some type of

14th Annual Choctaw Indian Arts Show Opens Labor Day Weekend

The 14th Annual Choctaw Indian Arts show will officially open to the public Saturday, Sept. 2, during the Labor Day Festival at Tvshka Homma.

The show will be housed in the upstairs art gallery of the Capitol Museum and will be open for viewing until 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 3.

Many Choctaw artists have submitted entry forms to the show with works in seven categories: painting, graphics, pottery, basketry, sculpture, jewelry and cultural.

The Annual Indian Art Show has grown since its inception in 2003.

Over the past five years, the average number of works featured in the show after judges view the submissions for eligibility, overall quality and appropriateness has been over 100.

Awards are given for first, second and third places in each category, as well as three Heritage awards, one People's Choice award and one Best of Show.

Pieces purchased from the show have gone on to be included in both tribal and non-tribal collections, as well as part of the per-

Choctaw artists ages 18 and up are eligible to enter up to three original artworks in any category.

Each year, works are submitted by Choctaws from Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, California, Washington, Oregon and Connecticut, just to name a few.

This year, awards will be presented during the VIP reception and pre-sale Friday, Sept. 1, and the show will open to the public Saturday at 10 a.m.

People's Choice ballots may be cast by any visitor to the show all day Saturday. The winner will be posted Sunday as the show re-opens for viewing.

labor, a girdle was worn around the waist in which the ends could be tucked into for efficiency of movement.

In the metaphor, the message is to encourage the believers to be mentally alert, and to stay focused on the upcoming promise and to set affections on things above (Colossians 3:1).

The enemy's purpose is to divert our minds. Instead of being spirituality minded, we can become carnally minded (Romans 8:6). A loose garment or loose thinking creates our minds to stumble and we can allow loose living to master our thought life.

We can become cold, indifferent, dull and listless in spiritual things and become engrossed in the secular life. To gird up the loins of your minds is to prepare to battle the opponent and to labor for the glory that is forthcoming.

The second part of this verse exhorts the believer to "be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming (1 Thessalonians 2:19 KJV)?

This same Jesus who ascended into heaven will again visit the earth in a bodily presence (Acts 1:11) at the end of the age (Matthew 24:3).

He will come in power and glory to destroy the Antichrist and evil (2 Thessalonians 2:8). The power and glory now possessed by Christ will be revealed and disclosed to the world.

Christ is now reigning as Lord at God's right hand (Hebrew 12:2), sharing God's throne (Revelations 3:21). His authority is not discernible to the world now, but will be made visible by His "appearing." The return of Christ will also be a "revelation" or a "removing the cover" from something that is hidden.

The Apostle Peter is encouraging Christians to gird up the loins of the mind and to be steadfast in the faith knowing that this present life is just a pilgrimage to a permanent residence in Glory with our Lord.
