Choctaw Days returning to Smithsonian

By LISA REED
Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma

Choctaw Days is returning to the Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, D.C., for its third straight year. The event, scheduled for June 21-22, will provide a Choctaw Nation cultural experience for thousands of visitors.

"We find Choctaw Days to be just as rewarding for us as the people who come to the museum say it is for them," said Chief Gregory E. Pyle. "We meet families vacationing from places like Switzerland, Italy and Africa. It is a great opportunity to share culture."

The Choctaw Nation princesses will have a world map set up and encourage everyone to place a pushpin in the general area of their home. The map from last year's event was covered with the multi-colored circles, not only in the United States, but also representing vacationers from 23 other countries. Miss Choctaw Nation Cheyenne Murray, Junior Miss Choctaw Nation Cheyenne Shomo and Little Miss Choctaw Nation Josephine Gilmore will open each day with the "Lord's Prayer" in sign language and perform a "Four Directions Ceremony" in the afternoon.

Approximately 1,000 tribal members live in the Washington area and look forward each year to reconnecting with their heritage.

Visitors will be able to hear the Choctaw language through conversations, songs and stories. Dancers will mimic the antics of the playful raccoon and the curving paths of the snake. The Choctaw, unlike most tribes, include women in war dances, recognizing the important role of women in their society. The dancers are scheduled to perform three times each day, demonstrating several Choctaw Social Dances including the Four-Step War Dance, the Wedding Dance and the Stealing Partners Dance.

Pottery, moccasin, basket weaving and Choctaw flute experts will showcase the creativity passed down through generations. The skill of today's craftsmen reflect the versatility implemented centuries ago out of necessity combined with improved techniques made possible by modern materials and equipment.

"One of my favorite things during the festival is watching people's expressions as they walk from table to table," said Assistant Chief Gary Batton. "They are fascinated with the process of shaping a clay bowl or a basket from river cane. The Choctaw Nation has some of the best instructors in the country on historic preservation."

Choctaw Nation Cultural Services staff will also be holding make-and-take sessions from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. and 2- 4 p.m. each day to teach how to make animal forms with glass beads that would be ideal to hang on a key chain or lanyard. The finished work will be a treasured keepsake of the time spent at Choctaw Days.

Janis McKinney's beaded Choctaw jewelry adds sparkle to the eyes of girls from the ages of 2 to 92. She and husband, Karl, will set up a booth with everything from simple bracelets and hair barrettes to intricate medallions and collars worn with traditional clothing. Visitors can watch as McKinney continuously works with her beads or sews a Choctaw dress for one of her daughters or granddaughters.

Everyone who comes together to present Choctaw Days is multi-talented. Most of the artists can also dance, chant or sing. Storyteller Tim Tingle brings many elements to life in his tales. Surrounded by his audience, Tingle becomes a rabbit or a turtle. The author often includes sad laments or rhythmic beats of a drum with his stories, capturing and holding the attention of all who hear. He turns the sad thoughts of the Trail of Tears to happy sounds of laughter with a description of how the rabbit lost his tail, waving his hands above his head to imitate the long floppy ears of a cottontail. Tingle tells of Choctaw trials, travels and triumphs.

There will be much to see, hear, and taste during Choctaw Days. The Choctaw Nation's cultural awakening will be evident throughout the Potomac Atrium, films in the theater and in the Mitsitam Native Foods Cafe with several Choctaw Choctaw-inspired dishes on the menu.

The Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian is located at 4th St. and Independence Ave., SW in Washington, D.C.

There will be a book-signing for the 200-page book, "Choctaw: A Cultural Awakening" from 12-1 p.m. Saturday, June 22, in the museum's Roanoke Museum Store on the second level.

'Choctaw: A Cultural Awakening' book launch held

The many facets of the Choctaw Nation reflect paths traveled by thousands over many miles. The Choctaw people persevered through centuries of change and have emerged as one of the largest and progressive nations in the world. Choctaw history and culture have provided a strong foundation and more and more tribal members today are experiencing a revival of interest in their heritage.

Capturing the essence of the nation is "Choctaw: A Cultural Awakening," a striking 200-page collection of images, history and information. Exploring through photos and stories by spiritual and historical leaders such as Virginia Espinoza, Bill Coleman and Eleanor Caldwell, "Choctaw: A Cultural Awakening" shows that members of the third-largest Indian Nation are from all walks of life, performing diverse jobs, and come from an amazing heritage.

"Choctaw: A Cultural Awakening" features families whose lives are ingrained with the rich heritage of the Choctaw Nation.

Two events were held recently to celebrate this photographic and historical collection of Choctaw culture – a book launch and signing on April 13 at Full Circle Bookstore in Oklahoma City and a book signing on April 30 at the Donald W. Reynolds Community Center and Library in Durant.

Major contributors Dr. Ian Thompson, Judy Allen and Eleanor Caldwell, along with award-winning photographer David Fitzgerald, were on-hand to autograph copies of the book.

Countless visitors came to get their books signed and speak with the authors, including sisters Rhoda Anderson and Linda Nelson-Addis, who attended the second event in Durant.

"A Cultural Awakening." That title really spoke to me," says Anderson of McAlester. "I love it because it shows how we are beginning to expose our real culture, our clothing, food, language, anything that keeps our culture going. We are being brought together with our programs and events but without our culture, we are lost. It's good to see it all come together in this book. This speaks to my heart."

"You can tell a lot of thought went into this book," says Nelson-Addis of Durant. "It is very well put

Century Chest reveals Oklahoma’s ‘hidden treasures’

From the Desk of
Chief Gregory E. Pyle

What an honor it was to participate in the opening of the Oklahoma Century Chest, which was sealed April 22, 1913, filled with books, artwork, letters, recordings and diverse memorabilia from across the state. This 3’x3’x6’ time capsule was buried in the basement of the First Lutheran Church of Oklahoma City in 1913 and unearthed a century later to reveal the treasures that had been carefully placed inside. This effort of putting tokens of state history into a 100-year chest showed tremendous foresight. I appreciate the long-term vision and teamwork it entailed to accomplish.

A lot of the items and letters in the pure copper chest were of Native American origin. I found it amazing that community leaders in 1913 felt it important to include Indian history and messages even though federal government had effectively disbanded Oklahoma tribal governments in 1906, one year prior to statehood.

One of the first Choctaw items to see the light of day after a

The Choctaw Definer is similar to a small dictionary, with the Choctaw alphabet and definitions of Choctaw words.

100-year rest in the airtight chest buried was a bois d’arc bow, donated by Dan Julius Folsom. As the white-gloved preservationists began lifting it out of the rectangular copper chest where it rested at the front of the church for the big “reveal,” a couple hundred of us leaned forward in our seats to get a better look. The dark brown wood was smooth, it appeared to be supple and in great condition. Just as the bow in our Great Seal, I think this one could have been strung and ready to use at a moment’s notice!

Other tremendous Choctaw items included a Choctaw definer, a Choctaw Testament, beautiful beadwork, Folsom family photographs and a Choctaw hymn book. The hymn-book was not at all similar in appearance to the red books we sing from today. The 1913 version was a thin, horizontal hymn book with a white cover, titled in black letters “Choctaw Baptist Hymn Book.” Inscribed inside was “Presented to the Century Chest by Rev. J.S. Murrow, Atoka Oklahoma, April 22nd, 1913. Mrs.

Caarina Robb a life long friend of the above assisted in translating the hymns in this book. Her father, Rev. Isreal Folsom, was the man who translated the Lord’s Prayer into the Choctaw language.”

Personal letters, including a message from 1913 Choctaw Chief Victor Locke, had individual wax seals that prevented the letters from being opened and read on the day of the opening. Staff from the Oklahoma History Center and preservations will carefully open each letter so that the seals will remain intact and ensure the paper on the letters is conserved. The Chief Locke message to the Choctaw Nation from a century ago is one that I look forward to reading. Hopefully, we can share that message with you in the near future!

The contents of the Century Chest will be on exhibit at the Oklahoma History Center in Oklahoma City in November of 2013 so the public can view the fascinating contents and learn each item’s story, which helps us all learn about the rich heritage of our state and tribe.

The 1913 version of a Choctaw hymn book was included in the Century Chest, translated by Caarina Robb and donated by Rev. J.S. Murrow of Atoka.

Assistant Chief Gary Batton and a large group of Choctaw Nation employees, some of whom are not pictured, participated in this year’s “Walk a Mile in Her Shoes” 5K, 1 mile Fun Run or walk. The event is a national campaign that promotes awareness of sexual violence, the idea being, “You don’t know what a person goes through until you have walked in their shoes.”

Heart of the Choctaw Nation exemplifies servant leadership

From the Desk of
Assistant Chief Gary Batton

Visiting with staff, Council and friends I am humbled and joyful that so many people have “after-work” hours filled with multiple activities that give back to the communities where we all live. Rewarding ways these people spend time with their families and friends include great projects such as community cleanups, delivering Meals on Wheels, joining volunteers for Families Feeding Families and participating in walks and runs that combine healthy lifestyles with “giving back to a good cause.”

One fun volunteer program some of us have been participating in at the Choctaw Nation Head Start Centers is the “Read to Lead” Program. Chief Pyle, Council members, Choctaw directors and staff have been volunteering to read stories to the Head Start children at the 14 centers. It is so enjoyable to sit in the middle of a group of young students and read a favorite story, and experience their enthusiasm and hear their laughter. I am not sure who enjoys the storybook time more, the kids or the adult who is reading!

For a couple of years, we worked closely with the Oklahoma Department of Transportation who designated specific portions of two-mile stretches of highway that our Choctaw Nation volunteer team kept clean. The “green team” also led park beautification projects so families could have more pride in the appearance of outside recreational areas across Choctaw Nation. Our clean-up group has now put a focus on cleaning up towns. Recycling contests have been very successful and city clean-ups have garnered a variety of helpers. I appreciate all the volunteer workers who are dedicated to making Choctaw Nation a cleaner, greener place!

Over the last three years, Choctaw Nation has been a huge supporter of “Walk a Mile in her Shoes,” a national campaign that promotes awareness about the serious causes and effects of sexual violence. A large number of employees “kick up their heels” and participate in the walk each year, with the proceeds benefiting the local crisis shelter. Also, our family violence program provides awareness materials, T-shirts, and goodie bags for everyone who attends or participates in the event.

The employee involvement of the Meals on Wheels program at the Durant location has been a great way to show good stewardship to the senior citizens of this area. Meals on Wheels, Families Feeding Families, food drives and local food banks are all ways that we can assist with individuals and families who may need some extra help in this difficult economic time.

Whether the effort to help others is at church, work, or in the community, these acts of kindness and generosity show the true heart of Choctaw people and the heart of Choctaw Nation. Just as we helped the starving Irish in 1847, and more recently have been able to help many others in times of crisis, Choctaws have a loving heart and are willing to show it through their time and resources. Yakoke to all of you who have the heart of a servant – it exemplifies the mindset of our Choctaw ancestors and leaders!

District 10 Councilman Anthony Dillard volunteers for the Read to Lead program with Choctaw Head Start at the Atoka Center. He is one of the tribal leaders who has spent time this year reading to a Head Start class.

Chaplain’s Corner

Overcoming obstacles

Thank you for your prayers with my 89th Happy Birthday greetings on March 30. May God bless you much.

Will you read about Jesus and Zaccheus in Luke chapter 19 verses 1 through 10?

What is keeping you from coming to Jesus Christ? What is stopping you?

Zaccheus was a publican. That means that he was a tax collector. He was despised and he was a social outcast. He was a lonely man and he was hated for his work.

Zaccheus was curious. He wanted to see Jesus. But he had to overcome some obstacles in the way.

There was a big crowd and Zaccheus was a little man. Getting through the crowd was almost impossible. Everybody wanted to get close to Jesus.

Many people in that day wanted to know Jesus; as many people today want to know Him too. Something is missing in your life. You are not really happy, you just can’t be satisfied. You want something else in life.

Zaccheus was making money. He was not satisfied. Money is not the answer.

Perhaps you would like to know and have Jesus in your heart and to have salvation. You may be facing obstacles too.

What are some of the obstacles that you may face?

First, there’s pride. The Bible teaches that pride can keep people from Jesus Christ. In James 4:5 we read: “...God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.”

A second obstacle that may keep you from Christ is idolatry. Idolatry is sin, because whether or not we realize it, we worship ourselves and other people. The things that we have created have become gods. Anything that comes between you and God is idolatry.

A third obstacle that may keep you from Christ is worldliness. Jesus said in Mark 8:36-37, “For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?”

Many of you are selling your soul for a little bit of this world. But suppose you had all of the wealth of the whole world, and lost your own soul? You would say, “It isn’t worth it.” That word, “world,” means a world system dominated by evil, that means enmity with God. (James 4:4).

A fourth obstacle that keeps people from God is self-righteousness. The Bible says in Proverbs 30:12: “There is a generation that is pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

We are pure in our own eyes, we are patting ourselves on the backs, we say we are good when actually we continue to sin and break God’s laws.

REV. BERTRAM BOBB
Tribal Chaplain

Self-righteousness keeps us from Jesus Christ.

Now we have looked at some obstacles. Let’s look at Jesus. His is a personal call.

Jesus called Zaccheus by name. Because Zaccheus was short in stature, he had climbed a sycamore tree and was out on the limb sitting there, watching Jesus.

Suddenly, Zaccheus, one of the most unpopular men in town, heard his name called by Jesus. Imagine how startled he was. Out of the crowd, out of all those religious leaders, Zaccheus considered the worst sinner in town, was called by name.

The Bible says Jesus, the Good Shepherd, “...calletth his own by name, and leadeth them out.” (John 10:3)

In Genesis we read that God came into the Garden of Eden personally to call Adam. Later He called Abraham and Jacob and Moses and Joshua. When the Lord Jesus Christ came, He called His disciples by name, and they followed Him.

Jesus calls you by name. He knows your name. He knows all about you and He calls you.

He says, “I want to come into your heart. You need me to help you, to forgive you, to take you to heaven. Come to me.”

It was an urgent call. Jesus said, “Zaccheus make haste!

And that’s what He says to you – “Hurry! Make haste!” If you are going to Christ, come now.

Nowhere does the Bible promise that tomorrow you can be saved. It’s today. Today He is urgently calling you by name.

And Zaccheus did make haste. Receiving Jesus Christ involves an act of faith beyond human reason. The Bible says in I Corinthians 2:14, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.”

Zaccheus just joyfully followed Jesus by faith, and Jesus received him and forgave him. Jesus is knocking on your heart’s door. He is asking you to receive Him. Are you a sinner? Have you broken God’s law?

You can say as many others, “I am a sinner, I deserve judgment and hell, but I am going to heaven because of Jesus Christ. I have received Christ. I have come to the cross and He has forgiven my sin. I have eternal life, and I know that I am saved. If Jesus Christ should come back today, I am ready.” Are you ready?

Pray for America and for our leaders. Pray for our men and women in our armed forces.

Appreciative of respect shown

I would like to express my appreciation to the Choctaw Nation Honor Guard, the Choctaw Nation singers, District 2 Councilman Tony Messenger and District 2 seniors for their show of respect of my father, Robert William Frazier Sr. My father was a proud member of the Choctaw Nation and of the U.S. Army serving during the Korean War. Again, many thanks to you.

Pam Aday, daughter

Thankful for health clinic

I wish to thank the Choctaw Nation, and especially the hearing clinic and Dr. Christiansen of the Talihina Health Center. He helped me and made every effort to see that my hearing aids were comfortable and working properly for me. When I left the clinic, I was so excited, that I forgot to take the box the hearing aids came in, so Dr. Christiansen's nurse mailed it to me.

He is the greatest, and I feel like I have my life back. Thank you so much.

Martha Gujda

Thank you for scholarship

I am really enjoying this semester at Florida College. I made all A's last semester, and I've been involved in many activities, including theater and piano recitals, but I still find time to get all of my homework finished.

Florida College is a wonderful place, and I love it more and more each day. I'd like to thank the Choctaw Nation for giving me this opportunity. The scholarship means a lot to me, and I would not be able to be here without your help.

Ali Williams

Football player thankful for clinic

I would like to thank Dr. Copeland, the Choctaw Nation and the Choctaw Nation health clinic for helping me with my diabetes. Other than taking a bunch of shots daily and watching my diet, you have made my life very full.

I was able to work hard and played high school football in Garland, Texas. I received a full scholarship to West Virginia University as a kicker. I will be the starting kicker next year as a red-shirt freshman. The photo was the day before my spring game.

Butch Lambert

Appreciative of Happy Heart Program

I would like to thank the Happy Heart Program, the ladies, Mandy Grammer, Raina Sparks, Jamie King and Joyce Blanchard. These ladies were kind and knew their programs. The program was full of things I have not thought about or knew. The food was great and I was told low-fat and low-calorie. The Belle Starr lodge at Robbers Cave in Wilburton was a great place, the view was great. My husband, Sonny, and I enjoyed it and learned a few things. Thanks again, Choctaw Nation.

Biskinik article brings back memories for a father and daughter

I would like to thank you for the piece on Sidney White and the stickball story. My dad, John Labor Sr.'s, eyesight is failing him, but each time the Biskinik arrives, we go over it together. Sometimes he hears a name he recognizes and a memory is sparked, then I get to hear a story. It makes the paper that much more enjoyable for both of us.

When Daddy heard the name "Sidney White," he became excited and hurried to get his stickball sticks. This was his second set of "Sidney White's." He told me how he came to have two sets, and it brought back memories for me, when as a child, I watched him play. He loved the game and was proud to have known Mr. White personally.

Thankful for help in time of need

Thank you so very much to the Choctaw Nation for its help in our time of need. Our brother, Ben Henry Filmore Jr., passed away Dec. 20. I can't say thank you enough to the staff; the kind ladies that worked in tribal services were so helpful, and even offered their condolences. Many thanks to Chief Pyle and other leaders that make decisions to allow funding to be used for burials.

Again, thank you from the family of Ben Filmore, Priscilla Clark, Carla DeCoteau, James Clark, Monica Clark, Jamie DeCoteau, Felicia Wells and Ciani Filmore.

Justin graduates from University of Kentucky

I sincerely thank Chief Pyle, Larry Wade, all of the Higher Education department and personnel, and the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma for all the generous scholarship assistance that I have received.

The Choctaw Nation scholarships have allowed me to first complete a degree from Elizabethtown College in 2009 and now a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Kentucky. I graduated on the 14th of December 2012 with a degree in economics and a minor in business.

I am proud to be a Choctaw tribal member, and I will always remember your support to help me obtain a better education for life.

Happy Healthy Heart

Reducing your sodium intake and increasing potassium will improve heart health

Two important ways to decrease heart disease and stroke include decreasing sodium and taking in adequate potassium. According to the American Heart Association, about 98 percent of Americans eat more than twice as much sodium than is recommended for a healthy diet, consuming an average 3,436mg of sodium daily. If the average daily sodium intake was decreased to 1,500mg, the American Heart Association/ American Stroke Association reports that high blood pressure would decrease nearly 26 percent and more than $26 billion in healthcare costs would be saved over just a year! Most sodium taken in by Americans comes from processed foods. By checking the food labels for lower sodium foods and getting fresh foods when possible can help to decrease the strain on the heart.

With that said, potassium is very beneficial in helping to decrease high blood pressure. By taking in adequate amounts of potassium daily, this helps the body to excrete sodium. Potassium also helps blood vessel walls to relax and this too will help decrease pressure on the heart. The recommended daily intake of potassium for an average adult is about 4,700mg. The Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension (DASH) eating plan focuses on foods that are good sources of potassium.

Potassium rich foods include:

- Sweet potatoes/potatoes
- Greens/ spinach
- Mushrooms
- Lima beans/peas
- Bananas
- Oranges
- Cantaloupe and honeydew melons
- Prunes
- Apricots
- Fat-free or 1% milk and yogurt
- Tuna

Try the tasty recipe above to increase the potassium in your diet today!

Saving money and energy this summer

Bigger isn't always better for an air conditioner. Learn effective ways to stay cool while saving energy.

Buying a bigger room air conditioner won't necessarily make you feel more comfortable during the hot summer months.

In fact, a room air conditioner that's too big for the area it is supposed to cool will perform less efficiently and less effectively than a smaller, properly sized unit. Central air-conditioning systems need to be sized by professionals.

If you have a central air system in your home, set the fan to shut off at the same time as the compressor, which is usually done by setting the "auto" mode on the fan setting. In other words, don't use the system's central fan to provide air circulation -- use circulating fans in individual rooms.

Instead of air-conditioning, consider installing a whole-house fan. Whole-house fans work in many climates and help cool your home by pulling cool air through the house and exhausting warm air through the attic. Use the fan most effectively to cool down your house during cooler times of the day: your home will stay cooler through the hotter times of the day without using the fan.

Cooling Tips

- Set your thermostat at as high a temperature as comfortably possible in the summer, and ensure humidity control if needed.
- The smaller the difference between the indoor and outdoor temperatures, the lower your overall cooling bill will be.
- Avoid setting your thermostat at a colder setting than normal when you turn on your air conditioner. It will not cool your home any faster and could result in excessive cooling and, therefore, unnecessary expense.
- Consider using an interior fan along with your window air conditioner to spread the cooled air through your home without greatly increasing your power use.
- Avoid placing appliances that give off heat such as lamps or TVs near a thermostat.

Long-Term Savings Tips

If your air conditioner is old, consider buying an energy-efficient model. Look for the ENERGYSTAR® and Energy Guide labels. Qualified room air conditioners are 10 percent more efficient, and qualified central units are about 14 percent more efficient than standard models.

Consider installing a whole-house fan or evaporative cooler if appropriate. Visit energy.gov for more tips to make your home energy efficient.

Be an active family

10 tips for becoming more active as a family

Physical activity is important for children and adults of all ages. Being active as a family can benefit everyone. Adults need 2.5 hours of physical activity a week, and children need 60 minutes a day. Follow these tips to add more activity to your family's busy schedule.

1. Set specific activity times

Determine time slots throughout the week when the whole family is available. Devote a few of these times to physical activity. Try doing something active after dinner or begin the weekend with a Saturday morning walk.

2. Plan ahead and track your progress

Write your activity plans on a family calendar. Let the kids help in planning the activities. Allow them to check it off after completing each activity.

3. Include work around the house

Involve the kids in yard work and other active chores around the house. Have them help you with raking, weeding, planting, or vacuuming.

4. Use what is available

Plan activities that require little or no equipment or facilities. Examples include walking, jogging, jumping rope, playing tag, and dancing. Find out what programs your community recreation center offers for free or minimal charge.

5. Build new skills

Enroll the kids in classes they might enjoy such as gymnastics, dance, or tennis. Help them practice. This will keep things fun and interesting, and introduce new skills!

6. Plan for all weather conditions

Choose some activities that do not depend on the weather conditions. Try mall walking, indoor swimming, or active video games. Enjoy outdoor activities as a bonus whenever the weather is nice.

7. Turn off the TV

Set a rule that no one can spend longer than 2 hours per day playing video games, watching TV, and using the computer (except for school work). Instead of a TV show, play an active family game, dance to favorite music, or go for a walk.

8. Start small

Begin by introducing one new family activity and add more when you feel everyone is ready. Take the dog for a longer walk, play another ball game, or go to an additional exercise class.

9. Include other families

Invite others to join your family activities. This is a great way for you and your kids to spend time with friends while being physically active. Plan parties with active games such as bowling or an obstacle course, sign up for family programs at the YMCA, or join a recreational club.

10. Treat the family with fun physical activity

When it is time to celebrate as a family, do something active as a reward. Plan a trip to the zoo, park, or lake to treat the family.

STAR Program

Since the Success Through Academic Recognition (STAR) Program began in 2007, more than 60,000 awards for all A's, all A's and/or B's and perfect attendance have been given to tribal members in the second through 12th grade in amounts totaling more than $1.1 million. The STAR Program is thrilled to have reached this milestone and wishes to highlight some of the achievements of young Choctaws that have been consistently awarded in the program since its inception.

One of these individuals is Jason Bugos, son of Kenneth and Imogene Bugos of Red Oak. Jason attends Talihina High School and concurrently attends a branch of the Oklahoma School of Science and Mathematics, driving back and forth to Poteau each day for advanced classes. In spite of his demanding academic schedule, Jason is also extremely dedicated to Choctaw Nation's Youth Advisory Board. As president of his local chapter, much time and effort is demanded of him. He is ready to close out his senior year and enjoy his summer at home before he moves to New York, where he will be attending Columbia University's Fu Foundation School of Engineering and Applied Science. He plans to major in a subject related to applied physics, perhaps nuclear or civil engineering. He feels that the STAR Program has guided and inspired him to reach beyond what he initially thought possible; he knows that he is well supported by the Choctaw Nation.

In the future, Jason aspires to hold an advanced degree and have a secure job. "Hopefully, I would like to come back here someday and somehow use what I learn to help out in my community and give back, helping other people," he stated. He possesses a genuine desire to better himself for the benefit of his family, Choctaw people and the general scientific community.

Another STAR senior is Raven Harp of Bennington. He is the son of Clark and Brenda Harp and attends Bennington High School. He has already begun some of his college coursework his senior year and will be a new inductee into the Oklahoma Indian Student Honor Society. In his spare time, Raven enjoys archery and video games. He has received many awards from the STAR Program and remarks that STAR has encouraged him to strive harder to reach his goals.

After graduation, Raven will be attending Southeastern Oklahoma State University in Durant. He plans to major in computer science and business. His studies will enable him to be a part of an advancing age of technology, and he hopes to one day own his own computer business, specializing in programming and repairs. He is proud to be Choctaw, having said, "We give honor to those that are deserving of it."

The STAR Program is proud of all its students, especially those graduating. We would love to hear about your graduating senior's accomplishments and plans. Please feel free to contact the STAR Program at 800-522-6170 or facebook.com/choctawnationstar.

The staff of Choctaw Nation's STAR Program would like to remind all parents with children in second through 12th grades that the deadline for submission of documents is approaching. The final deadline for students to be awarded for the Spring semester is Oct. 1, but awards are processed as soon as all documents are received.

Requirements for all eligibility and incentives given are listed: Students must have Choctaw tribal membership, all A's ($25 Walmart gift card), all A's and/or B's ($10 Walmart gift card), perfect attendance ($25 Walmart gift card), and all students receiving an incentive will also receive a Choctaw STAR Student vehicle decal or certificate.

Required STAR documents are available online and are listed here: STAR application (one-time application), grade and attendance verification form (to be completed by a school official and returned once per semester), and copy of the semester report card. All of these documents may be submitted via mail, email or fax.

For more information about the STAR Program, please visit star.choctawnation.com or call 800-522-6170 ext. 2787. You may also visit the STAR Program's Facebook, at facebook.com/choctawnationstar.

EDUCATION

Pictured are the third nine-weeks super students of Jones Academy, first through sixth grade: Hoshonti Alvarez-Colecio (first/ second grade), Jadlen Wallace (third grade), Joslyn Jones (fourth grade), Denyunhia Willis (fifth grade), Erin Willis (sixth grade) and Lane Rust (alternative).

What makes a student super? Some would say making straight A's is what it takes, but teachers know straight A's do not make up a total student. Curiosity, love of learning and respect of others add to the mix. Ms. Nichols, second-grade teacher, said of Hoshonti that he is well-behaved and always has his work finished and turned in on time. He is an excellent reader and loves social studies. The Civil and Revolutionary Wars are of special interest to Hoshonti. Fifth-grade student Denyunhia is competitive in basketball and likes doing outside and weekend activities. She brings her willingness to participate to the classroom, where she excels in reading aloud and is not afraid to lead or be open to new learning experiences. These are just two of the students who have been named super students throughout the year, but they are representative of all of them.

Lacy has essay published

Senior Jones Academy student Lacy Walker has recently had an essay accepted to be published by Creative Communication, a book and online publisher in Smithfield, Utah. The company is a publishing agency that promotes creative writing for school-age students in the United States. Student makes history

Melissa Sam, 17 years old, is making history at Jones Academy. The academy was established in 1891 outside Hartshorne. It was an all-male facility until 1955, when Wheelock, a non-reservation school for Indian girls, was closed. At the time, approximately 55 female students were transferred to Jones. It was in 1952, however, that the educational component of the school at Jones Academy was moved to Hartshorne Public Schools. Since then, the boarding students have made great academic strides in the public school system. Melissa will be the first student at Jones Academy to represent the facility as the Hartshorne High School senior class salutatorian. The students and staff at the academy are very proud of her scholastic achievements and support her in all her endeavors. Melissa is also a dedicated student athlete, who participated in varsity slow- and fast-pitch softball and served as captain. Her post-secondary plans include attending Northeastern State University in Tahlequah and becoming a forensic scientist. She is the daughter of Germaine Sam of Downey, Calif., and Morris Sam of Hartshorne.

Victor Jefferson

Victor Willard "Buster" Jefferson, 88, of Oklahoma City, passed away on March 16, 2013, of heart failure in Norman. Buster was also known variously to his family, friends and coworkers as Buck or Jeff. He was born on Oct. 8, 1924, in Lodi, to Ida Jefferson Wade. He attended Cedar Church and was baptized in Jefferson Creek after making his profession of faith. Along with his three brothers, he attended Jones Academy for boys near Hartshorne and graduated from Chilocco Indian School near Newkirk. While at Chilocco, Buster met Geraldine Louise "Jerry" LeClaire, the love of his life whom he eventually married on Aug. 15, 1946, in Fort Smith, Ark. Drafted into the Army in 1943, Buster served in Europe, first with the 807th Tank Destroyers, but finished the war as an infantry scout for Company B, 379th Regiment, 95th Infantry Division. Buster fought in the Battle of the Bulge and participated in the liberation of Metz, a town in a historically heavily contested area of eastern France, which had not been taken by force since the Fifth Century. It was at Metz that the 95th acquired its nickname, The Iron Men of Metz, when a general leading the German forces speculated that the Americans must be "made of iron." As an infantry scout, Buster led his company as the first man into the fray each and every day. During the capture of an important bridge at Saarlautern, Germany, he was the first soldier to cross the structure in spite of the fact that it had been rigged with 500-pound bombs by the Germans to prevent its being taken by the Allies. Near the end of the war, Buster was invited to escort a group of officers as they received the surrender of a German division in a town the Ruhr Valley. Buster was wounded twice and awarded the Purple Heart and also received a Bronze Star for valor with an Oak Leaf Cluster. After the war, Buster returned to Chilocco to finish his senior year. Having boxed since his days at Jones, including a tumultuous stint on the Army boxing team, Buster scored a knockout in 17 seconds of the first round in his first bout, a mismatch against a heavyweight even though he normally fought at 165 lbs. After graduation Buster and Jerry were married and moved to Enid where their first two boys were born. From there they moved to Kansas City, Mo., while Buster attended trade school to become an electrician. In 1951 the couple returned to Oklahoma. Buster worked for 20 years in International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 1141 and ran his own contracting business, Jefferson Electric. He then worked in the Gulf of Mexico for Mobil Oil from 1978 until 1991, and Locke Electrical Supply from 1991 until 2010, when he retired at age 86. Buster was the original person responsible for changing the light bulbs on the Channel 9 broadcast tower, which at the time, was the tallest man-made structure in the world. In Buster's childhood home only the Choctaw language was spoken and he did not learn English until he was seven years old. Buster served as the first native speaker in the University of Oklahoma's Choctaw language program. Buster enjoyed traveling; with Jerry, he visited all but four states. He was an avid gardener and loved taking his dogs on long walks. Thompson, as Tribal Historic Preservation Officer, archaeologist and coordinator for Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA), works to protect sacred and historic sites, researches Choctaw history and is dedicated to revitalizing the traditional culture. He learned many of the Choctaw art forms in his youth and instructs others in making bows, arrows, flint knapping, pottery, basketry and more.

Allen has worked with Thompson on many projects and has been committed to sharing the Choctaw culture throughout the world. She has been instrumental in the recognition of the Choctaw Code Talkers of World War I who were inducted into the Oklahoma Military Hall of Fame last year. Allen was also named one of Oklahoma's 50 Women Making a Difference in 2012.

This year's graduating class consisted of 61 seniors from across the Choctaw Nation's 10.5 counties. These students were recognized by their advisors, their families, peers and leaders of the Choctaw Nation for their service and efforts to better their communities and themselves. YAB Chair Courtney Patterson served as the night's master of ceremonies. He was accompanied by guest speakers Director of Youth Empowerment Martina Hawkins, Tribal Council Speaker Delton Cox, former YAB student, Jessie Blackwell, and Outreach Specialist Clint Cannon. A banquet was provided during the evening's events with the junior class of YAB members serving guests as part of their volunteer efforts and honoring their fellow students. Choctaw Nation Outreach adds programs, helps more families

Better Beginnings now includes Tribal PREP and Chahta Vlla Apela programs

By CHRISSY SHEPARD
Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma

The Choctaw Nation Outreach program has recently added two new programs to its Better Beginnings branch —the Tribal PREP (Personal Responsibility Educational Program for the Prevention of Teen Pregnancy) and Chahta Vlla Apela program were added to join the SPPT (Support for Pregnant and Parenting Teens) program and Chahta Inchukka (Tribal Maternal Early Childhood Program).

The Better Beginnings program, which receives its grants from the Department of Health and Human Services, was added to Outreach about three years ago, said Senior Director of the program Angela Dancer.

“All of our programs are providing evidence-based curriculums that have been proven to be effective, and we’re bringing those curriculums to Native American communities,” Angela explained.

This is a significant achievement for the tribe, according to Angela. “There are no evidence-based curriculums that currently have been tested on Native Americans, so this is a new avenue,” she said. “Even though the curriculum has been proven, it hasn’t been proven with our target population, so we’re going to be one of the first programs out there that is providing an evidence-based curriculum to Native American communities.”

Dancer has worked for the tribe for 19 years and the Outreach program for 10 years.

“We have over 22 programs,” said Angela of Outreach, saying the programs focus on going out into the community and providing needed services to tribal members.

The Outreach program houses over 118 employees, and Randy Hammons serves as executive director.

With its two new programs, Better Beginnings has also added two new directors to its team: Christi Hammons for Tribal PREP and Barbara Moffitt for Chahta Vlla Apela.

“Chahta Vlla Apela means ‘helping our Choctaw children’,” said Barbara about her program, which was approved in January of this year.

Barbara’s program is similar to the existing Chahta Inchukka program, directed by Brandi Smallwood. “They’re serving people in at-risk situations,” said Angela, adding that “at-risk” is a broad definition and encompasses many areas such as mental health, substance abuse, child abuse, single parent or low income issue involved.

Angela said Barbara and Brandi’s programs are from the same funding but two different grants, whereas, the SPPT grant, directed by Rebecca Morris, is strictly for the teen population. Teens must be under the age of 21, be expecting a child or have a child under the age of 1, and seeking an educational goal.

These three programs include home-based services. “This means our workers go into the clients home to provide the curriculum; usually twice a month,” said Angela.

According to Angela, Chahta Vlla Apela, Chahta Inchukka, and SPPT are teaching a curriculum entitled “Parents As Teachers,” which is a parent-child interaction plan that focuses on the child development stage and the social wellbeing of the entire family.

Choctaw Nation: CHRISSY SHEPARD

Angela provided an example of how one of these home visits would take place: with the parent(s) observing, the Outreach worker would ask the young child to perform a basic activity, such as covering a toy with a towel and having the child look for and discover it. They would then ask the parent to perform the same activity, while observing the parent interacting with the child and completing the task.

Following the activity, the worker would ask the parent why they believe this activity is helping the child grow and how it is benefiting that child at that age.

“We’re really trying to get the parent to think about the cognitive growth, motor skills and communication skills,” Angela said. “It’s all about cognitively growing these children, to be on task and looking for red flags.”

Every home visit will have a parent-child interaction to promote one-on-one play time. Each interaction is hand-picked by the worker to address a specific area of child development. All home visits also have a section related to family well-being. The worker and parent identify family needs and connect with other Choctaw Nation services and departments to fulfill those needs. “It encourages the parent to set goals for themselves and their child. Then the worker helps to locate resources and services to achieve those goals” said Angela.

We are positively influencing the next generation of children who will become the future leaders of our nation.

– Angela Dancer
Better Beginnings Senior Director

Chahta Inchukka and Vlla Apela workers also conduct home visits with the child’s future in mind. “The focus is, overall, child and family development, but school readiness as well,” said Angela. We’re looking at the kids prior to Head Start age, so hopefully we can find and address any red flags before school, so when they attend head start, they are ready and able to learn, she added.

“Let’s say a child is not developing correctly,” said Angela, “we have assessments that verify that child is struggling or in trouble. There are multiple screenings to see that the child is on task with his or her development.”

“I really enjoy the people,” said Barbara of her new job.

With the Chahta Vlla Apela being relatively new to Outreach, the program is currently in the “planning phase,” according to Barbara. “Right now, I’ve been conducting the needs assessment to identify exactly what areas or needs that community will have, and then we chose our evidence-base curriculum to fit those areas and needs,” she said.

While the programs ran by Barbara, Brandi, and Rebecca involve home visits, Christi’s Tribal PREP program requires her to visit local schools.

“I enjoy educating the kids,” Christi said, who works with students in grades 6 through 8 in four different schools.

Christi visits middle schools in Boswell, Fort Towson, Soper and Jones Academy twice a week.

“We have a curriculum that we teach called ‘Draw the Line, Respect the Line’,” said Christi, which is an evidence-based curriculum with studies supporting it.

According to Christi, Tribal PREP is intended to postpone the initiation of sex in adolescents, help prevent pregnancy, STDs and AIDS. “Hopefully we educate the students enough to help them make healthy choices,” she said.

Christi said when thinking of the future of Tribal PREP, she hopes for expansion and growth. “I hope we can expand the program and visit more schools,” she said. “In the future, if funding is available, we would like to not only visit schools, but hold community programs instead of strictly school-based settings.”

“I would love to see that program grow,” added Angela. She explained that while SPPT deals with teens who are pregnant or have a young child; Christi’s program focuses on preventing that pregnancy.

“The Choctaw Nation has a higher teen pregnancy rate inside of the 10 1/2 counties than that of the national rate,” stated Angela. “The vision of Christi’s grant was, let’s do something proactive to prevent those teenage pregnancies.”

Future plans for Better Beginnings include workers continuing providing for and helping families as much as possible, which Angela sees turning into a major accomplishment in the future.

“If we keep funding long enough to do enough intervention services, then between the three home-based services, we can be serving at least 200 families in the next year,” Angela said. In addition, the PREP program and the healthy choices curriculum they bring, “We are positively influencing the next generation of children who will become the future leaders of our nation.”

Voices 4 Survivors program seeks to decrease violence in community

In August 2010, the Choctaw Nation was awarded three grants from the Indian Health Service to address domestic violence and sexual assault within our Nation. These grants are providing much needed resources to most cherished citizens.

The Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma Voices for Survivors (V4S) program seeks to decrease the incidence of domestic violence and sexual assault and the trauma experienced by survivors.

V4S provides communities with prevention activities and education to increase awareness of sexual assault and domestic violence.

V4S was recognized recently for its outstanding work the past several years. “We just won the 2012 National Behavioral Health Achievement Award for sexual assault prevention,” said V4S Director Sandra Stroud.

Stroud passionately values her responsibilities as this program’s director and how it relates the Choctaw Nation as a tribe. “My feelings are that, even if one woman is suffering in silence, then we will all feel the repercussions of her pain; we are a people of heart.”

Services provided by V4S include: Sexual Assault Nursing Exam (SANE) Unit, Sexual Assault Response

Team (SART), Victim Advocacy, Forensic Interviewing (Child Advocacy Centers) and Community Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Prevention Education.

The development of SART consists of agencies and professionals that contribute to services for our Native men, women and children.

The purpose of the Choctaw Nation SART is to create a partnership of Choctaw Nation agencies and community agencies that will work cooperatively to end sexual violence in the Choctaw Nation community and to ensure the rights, dignity and safety of victims and survivors, said Stroud.

Stroud spoke of statistics and the importance of lowering these numbers. “Statistically, one out of three Native women will experience sexual assault at some point in her life,” she said. “The question that has been on my mind since we received this grant has been, ‘how do we change this statistic for our women?’”

According to Stroud, V4S seeks to decrease the incidence of sexual assault and the trauma experienced by survivors of sexual assault and/or domestic violence.

The program works to develop strategies to respond in an effective and cohesive manner to the needs of those served and facilitate inter-agency training to improve coordination, communication and service provision for our Native people.

V4S works to build a system of relatives who have basic understanding of the needs of tribal and community members. “We hold a partnership with a network of people throughout the tribe,” said Stroud.

Some of these “relatives” include the Choctaw Nation Project Empower to Dream, Victims Assistance, Tribal Police, Project SAFE, Outreach Services, Health Service Authority, Oklahoma Child Advocacy Centers (PCCARE, Kidz Kottage, Poteau Child Advocacy Center), Little Dixie Service Agency Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) and OK County Coalitions, Coordinated Response Teams, Multi-Disciplinary Teams, etc.

There are V4S staff members located in the Poteau, McAlester, Talihina and Antlers areas.

If you are interested in learning more about V4S or any of its programs, call 918-567-7000 ext. 6461.

Choctaw seniors in McAlester stay active

In the photo above, the seniors are in the process of making a quilt depicting a Choctaw theme. Donations will be accepted for a drawing of a lucky person to win the quilt. The funds will be used towards trips for the seniors. Mary Ann Fabrey, Dena Cantrell and Dora Mullins are pictured looking over some of the materials that will be used.

The McAlester senior citizens are interested in learning how to make Choctaw dresses. Charleen Samuels is demonstrating, from start to finish, how to make the dresses.

More of the senior citizens are getting into exercising on their own or with groups. One group meets each Tuesday and Thursday at the McAlester senior center. One of these seniors is Joan Hogan, left, who has been exercising at gyms and other places for 33 years. She is looking forward to her 93rd birthday in May and is still going strong. On the treadmill, she walks 1.5 miles in 30 minutes, then on the exercise bike, she rides 5 miles in 40 minutes. Exercise is great for your health, even if you sit in a chair and work with weights. The center hopes more seniors will get involved.

Making a Choctaw stone arrow point

Imagine yourself as a young Choctaw man living in Tvlipak-naka village 473 years ago. Today your town is alive with activity in response to the arrival of a messenger. He has brought news that a powerful, foreign army is on the march and will be moving into the area within a few days. Your heart thumps, as your mind races over stories that have been circulating in for months now from the communities to the east, through which this army has already passed. The soldiers have hairy faces, ride giant deer-like animals, wear metal armor, and carry weapons that shoot fire and sound like thunder. These people have been named “na hollo,” or “something powerful/holy,” because of their foreign technology, but they have proven to be as treacherous as they are merciless. They have looted, destroyed towns, enslaved and murdered countless civilians, and defeated every fighting force that has opposed them. The messenger has also brought a request from Chief Tvshkalusa for warriors to join him at the town of Mabila to boldly face this invading army. As a Choctaw man, it is your duty to give all that you have, including your life, to protect your loved ones. What do you do? It’s probably time to get your weapons in order.

In this month’s edition of Iti Fabvssa, we will look at how Choctaw people made their stone arrow points. Most of the stone points used on Choctaw arrows are small, triangular-shaped, and have a concave base (Fig. 1). They are of a type, known to modern collectors and archaeologists as “Madison points.” Over an 800-year span, between AD 900-1700, Madison points were the “business end” on the Choctaw arrows that were specifically intended for war or for hunting big game. These same points tipped many of the Choctaw arrows used against Hernando De Soto’s army in the Battle of Mabila in 1540.

Ancestral Choctaw people used several different types of rock for making chipped stone arrow points (see Iti Fabvssa 7/ 11). All of them are more or less flint-like, meaning that they break with a conchoidal fracture, like glass. This glass-like quality makes it possible to consistently chip them into sharp-edged implements and weapons. In the northeastern part of the Choctaw homeland, one of the stones most commonly used for making arrow points was Tuscaloosa chert. This stone was picked up from gravel bars along the Tombigbee River. In its natural form, the stone is yellow or brownish, and pretty tough. Thousands of years ago, ancestral Choctaw artisans learned that they could change the properties of this stone by carefully exposing it to just the right amount of heat. Heat-treating makes Tuscaloosa chert more brittle and glass-like, and a better raw material for making arrow points. It can also permanently transform Tuscaloosa chert from its natural yellowish color to a blood red (Fig. 2). The significance of this color change was certainly not lost on Choctaw people, who associated the color red with war and warriors.

For heat-treating to bring about the desired changes, heat must be applied in just the right way, and in just the right amount, otherwise, it may have no effect on the stone, or may even destroy it. Experiments have shown that Choctaw artisans heat-treated Tuscaloosa chert to around 1000 degrees Fahrenheit (Ensor 1981:84) before chipping it into Madison points. One traditional method of heat-treating is depicted in Figure 3. First, a pit is dug in the ground, and a fire built in it. After the fire burns down to coals, the coals are covered with dry sand. The stone to be heat-treated is arranged on the sand layer, and then covered with more sand. Another fire is built on top and allowed to burn for several hours. The heat-treated stone is dug out of the sand a day or two later, after it has cooled.

Today, a widespread misconception is that Native Americans made stone arrow points by dripping cold water on hot rocks to fracture them. This technique was sometimes used to break large stones into smaller pieces, but the breaks happen too randomly to be used to make a complex implement like an arrow point. Stone arrow points were and are made through a process that is known as “flintknapping” in English.

Through flintknapping, an artisan takes advantage of the conchoidal fracture of the stone. By applying force in just the right places, it is possible to chip and shape the stone in a desired manner. The flintknapping process can be complex and it takes many years to master. Even a fraction of the techniques and variables involved could not be fully described here, but several excellent books exist on the subject (Callahan 1979; Patten 1999; Waldorf 1994; Whittaker 2000).

Let us return to the young Choctaw man preparing to face the invading army. He picks up a flat, red cobble of heat-treated Tuscaloosa chert (Fig. 4a) to make a Madison point. First, he uses a hammerstone (Fig. 5a), to chip the rounded edges of the cobble into acute angles. He grinds these sharp edges on a piece of sandstone (Fig. 5b) to make them duller and stronger. Next, he picks up the rounded base of a deer antler (Fig. 5c), and strikes it against selected portions of the cobble’s prepared edges, driving off long, thin flakes, across the surface of the stone (Fig. 4b). Over the next few minutes, the sequence of preparing the stone’s edges and driving off flakes is repeated many times. Soon the stone, now called a “perform,” has become thin and roughly triangular-shaped (Fig. 4c). The man now picks up a deer antler tine in a wooden handle (Fig. 5d), pushes its tip against the edge of the perform, and removes a small, narrow flake. The antler tine is used to remove dozens of small flakes that shape the Madison point into its final outline, make its edges even, and give it a cross section that is relatively thick in the middle and thin and sharp on the edges. Finally, the man picks up a tool made from a deer ulna (Fig. 5e) and uses it to remove tiny, tiny flakes from the cutting edges of the arrow point. These give the finished point (Fig. 4d) fine serrations and make it ideal for slicing through the flesh and creating a bleeding wound.

Until 250 years ago, making a stone arrow point was a skill that nearly all Choctaw men had to develop. These points tipped arrows that would feed their families and protect them from their enemies. They had to be made correctly. On October 18, 1540, at the Battle of Mabila, ancestral Choctaw warriors stood boldly against De Soto’s army, filling the air with stone-tipped arrows, and inflicting 688 arrow wounds on his armored soldiers. That day, the Choctaw warriors gave all they had, including their lives, but they could not quite win the battle. However, the bravery of the Choctaw people and fierceness of their arrows demoralized De Soto’s force, and the invading army soon left the area.

Writing workshop held in Durant a success

On March 23 a workshop for Choctaw writers was led by author and storyteller, Sarah Elisabeth Sawyer. It equipped advanced and beginner Choctaw writers alike with knowledge and resources to write a Choctaw Removal story in fiction form, based on family histories. These stories are currently being compiled in an anthology for publication. The Artist Leadership Program of the Smithsonian’s National Museum of the American Indian, and the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma supported the workshop. It took place at the Choctaw Community Center in Durant. Twenty writers from across the state of Oklahoma as well as Tennessee, North Carolina, Mississippi, and Texas attended. NMAI Outreach Coordinator for the Artist Leadership Program Keevin Lewis, from Washington, D.C., joined the event as well.

The title of the workshop, Historical Fiction, Preserving Choctaw Removal Stories, best explains the content. This genre presents historical events, but in an entertaining fashion.

The goal for the workshop’s continuing project, a book of Removal stories, is to take true stories and present them in a way the mainstream public will be attracted to reading, while remaining historically and culturally accurate. As a result, this fiction educates the public in the real Choctaw history, not what they learned in school or from Hollywood about Native people. This book also strives to preserve these stories before they’re forgotten forever with the passing of the Choctaw elders.

“These Removal stories will not be gentle children’s stories,” writing instructor Sarah Elisabeth Sawyer said. “They should contain the tragedies and atrocities as well as the triumphs of our people.”

The writers participated in a special writing exercise based on photos taken at the Smithsonian’s NMAI Cultural Resources Center in Suitland, Md. These photos of a drum produced stories of reservation life, marching to the beats at boarding school, stickball, forgotten memories, and even a story from the drum’s perspective.

At the workshop, film director Lynda Kay Sawyer with RockHaven Productions interviewed various attendees on their reaction to the material presented. Among those was Jerry Colby, a 90-year-old woman from Asheville, N. C., who attended with her sister, Ramona Schrader of Knoxville, Tenn. Colby commented, “One reason I need to write about the history of my family, is because my children have asked questions. I’m the last one of my family who remembers a lot of these anecdotal stories and true stories about the Choctaw family.”

“In my own family, so much of our heritage has been lost,” said Bruce Darrell, who is from the Dallas, Texas, area. “I have to learn about my Native American culture through other families because it hasn’t been passed down in my family. I think it’s very important to pass it on.”

Leslie Widener, also from the Dallas area, remarked, “There’s a lot of emphasis on multicultural books right now for children, but there are not a lot on Native Americans that I’ve noticed. So that’s what I’m here for.”

Jason Lewis, of Carthage, Miss., said, “This workshop is going to impact my writing because just seeing the energy of people working on this part of our history as Choctaw people, that’s impacting me and inspiring me to get to work.” Jason Lewis is part of the Choctaw Tribal Language Program for the Mississippi Band of Choctaws.

NMAI Outreach Coordinator Keevin Lewis commented, “I think the overall impact of Sarah’s project will be in the stories that come in the future.

When one of the writers left, she looked me in the eye and said, ‘Thank you very much for giving us this opportunity, because I haven’t written in so long, and now, I want to write.’”

To be notified of when the book of Removal stories is available, please email me@ sarahelisabethwrites.com

Special thanks to Dining Around Caterers of Durant, who catered an abundant lunch for the workshop. Also volunteers Lynda Kay Sawyer of Canton, Texas, and Sherry McFerrin of Reno, Texas, for facilitating snacks and drinks throughout the day, and clean up at the conclusion of the all day event.

Art in the Southwest Air

Choctaw Artists exhibit work during Amarillo and Albuquerque cultural gatherings

Amarillo, Texas, was the first stop on Choctaw Nation's trip west. The meeting was held April 5 featuring, culture and news on current tribal issues. Several artists exhibited their work during the event, including Stephen McCullough, Charlene Dodson and Kimbra Simmons.

Stephen McCullough

Stephen McCullough is an Amarillo resident with galleries in Santa Fe, N.M., Scottsdale, Ariz., and Sedona, Ariz. He has been an artist for 25 years following in the footsteps of his twin brother Michael, who has been an artist for 35 years. He had been involved in other careers and decided it was time for a change. "I started in and never looked back," Stephen proclaimed.

Stephen specializes in image art of the Southwest – painting images that reflect the heritages and cultures of Native Americans in that area. He also paints with non-Southwestern themes, putting trees and other objects to canvas. He displays his work at three of the country's biggest Native American markets – The Santa Fe Indian Market, the Heard Museum Native Market and Red Earth Market.

He explains his interest in Native American art stems from it being a constant art form. "It is here today, was here yesterday, and will be here tomorrow." He went on to assert that in today's art scene, "it's cool to be native," but takes pride in the fact that he was displaying his heritage from the start. Stephen was a registered native on the day of his birth and proudly exclaims that he is "an artist who happens to be Native American," and not just following the trends.

Charlene Dodson

Artist Charlene Dodson was born in the heart of the Choctaw Nation, in Bokchito, but became a Texan at the age of 3. She left the borders of the Choctaw Nation, but the Choctaw Nation remained strong within her as she carried on her love for her heritage through her artwork.

Charlene works mainly in fabrics, printing and beading on quilts, leathers and more. She has enjoyed much success due to her ingenuity through artwork. She began a business called "Fabric Fotos," where she worked mainly with quilts, which saw success.

Eventually, from licensing fees she earned with her pioneering ways, she was able to open the American Indian Cultural Center. The center allowed representatives from many tribes to rent booths and display artwork from their respective cultures. Dodson served as the director for eight years until her retirement, when she says she "passed the torch" to the Kwahadi Heritage Center.

Though she has retired, Charlene still sells art and art kits that allow individuals to create their own artwork. For example, in her moccasin kit, one may choose a beaded design guide to be placed on the material and one may then learn to bead their own design following the printed guide.

Charlene says she has chosen to create native art because, "It's my heritage...I am proud to be Choctaw." Through her work with the cultural center in Amarillo and the guided beading kits, she feels that she has done well to spread her culture. "I love passing on my heritage," she declared.

Kimbra Simmons

Lubbock, Texas, resident Kimbra Simmons is a Choctaw artist who specializes in many types of crafts including dream catchers, jewelry, beading and leather work. She received her Choctaw connection from her mother as well as her beginnings in art. Since learning the basics years ago, she has been improving her art form with practice and online learning.

Over her time as an artist, Simmons has developed unique ways to construct her dream catchers, weaving them tight on the outside and gradually allowing the weave to become more loose towards the middle, whereas most simply have loose weaves throughout. Larger holes are left amidst the tight portion to "let good dreams pass through," explains Simmons.

She very much enjoys creating artwork that promotes native culture. "I am very driven to carry on my heritage," she exclaimed. Not only does she create native artwork, but takes language classes offered by the Choctaw Nation. Simmons' desire is that the culture of the Choctaw Nation and other native people never fades, but remains strong, and she hopes to contribute to that preservation.

Charlene Dodson discusses her work with guests of the Amarillo meeting

Stephen McCullough discusses his paintings, which portray aspects of the Southwest United States.

Kristin Gentry explains the various designs found on her jewelry and other works.

David McElroy discusses the process of making art from sterling silver.

Albuquerque, N.M., was the next city to experience Choctaw culture firsthand on the following day, April 6, 2013, sharing even more of age-old traditions. Artists who presented their creations included Kristin Gentry and David McElroy.

Kristin Gentry

Oklahoma State University graduate Kristin Gentry is a jewelry maker, photographer and much more who now resides in Albuquerque. "I grew up in an artistic family," said Kristin as she explained her introduction to the life of an artist.

She found she enjoyed art in high school and decided to study it more thoroughly in college. After graduating with a fine art degree, she continued her endeavors by doing gallery art, teaching at community centers. She has felt a connection to art through generations of her artistic family. Her grandfather was a wood carver and her father was an architectural draftsman.

A large portion of Kristin's work is with wood, creating many pieces of hand-painted jewelry on small sections of wood. "I like working with natural elements," said Kristin, who also does relief printing. This requires her to carve her designs into wood and then use a hand-crank to press the designs. "It is a very manual art form."

In her creations, Kristin prefers to utilize tribal designs, mentioning that she mainly sticks with Choctaw designs, but does some Cherokee as well. She states that she chooses to work with wood, even though it is sometimes more difficult. She feels called to the medium because of her grandfather's work with the material. Kristin is also a skilled painter and photographer.

David McElroy, a lawyer by profession, is also a silversmith who works with sterling silver to create Native American jewelry. "I have always loved traditional Southwest silverwork," David stated. "It is such a creative and lasting artform."

During his time as a lawyer, David spent eight years in the United Kingdom, where he began his silversmith training. He has since developed his skills and is now able to do repousse work, in which he uses a male and female die to press designs from the reverse side of the silver, forcing the shape to appear on the front facing side. He also incorporates semi-precious stones into his work to create a heightened unique quality.

David is the grandson of two original enrollees of the Choctaw Nation, a fact of which he is exceptionally proud. Though silverwork is not traditionally a Choctaw art form and most of his designs are inspired by Navajo and other Southwestern tribes, David hopes to make his medium of choice more associated with the Choctaw Nation.

In his studio located in Santa Fe, N.M., David also makes accessories such as candlesticks, boxes and dishes. He will be exhibiting his artwork in the Santa Fe Indian Market Aug. 16-18.
